www.transprop.com — Launched August 2004.

Developed website for Transportation Property Company, TPC, a full service real estate company. This website is coded entirely in CSS2 for faster loading and improved search engine optimization. Created a Flash logo and banners with animated text. This Flash banner loads random real estate images on web page refresh. Project completed with the expertise of Roushdi Guirguis, Project Manager at www.nwcircles.com.

Ken's prototype Flash website — Winter 2003

Developed as an experimental Flash web site for a friend's small wholesale business. (He engraves glass golf trophies & gifts.) The original idea was to script a password protected Flash website only for use with his wholesale business clients. The main Flash web page creates a scrolling product catalogue — listing all his merchandise! (He has around 50-60 items in his catalogue.) This website requires using very specific photo jpg naming conventions, exact photo jpg pixel sizes & a linked external text file for "merchandise info data." He could make changes to the "merchandise info data" text file, create new product jpgs and upload all these new updated files to his web server using FileZilla — The Flash web site reflects the change!

www.inner-design.com — Launched 2001.

Web site for Faye Pietrokowsky, Public Speaker and Life Coach. While being a simple web site to build, I found it challenging to pick images & write text explaining her service based on her knowledge of intuition. Creating a mood of credibility seemed to be the most important goal. So, I used soft fading flash text animation & soft sepia muted images to enhance the feel of her web site. In Spring 2004, I created a template for Faye's Macromedia Contribute software. She now updates & uploads articles herself.
